Prepare to give an oral comment at the Livermore Public Hearing May 12!

In 2024, a federal judge in South Carolina found that the United States Department of Energy (DOE) and the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA) failed to assess the environmental impact of their plutonium “pit” nuclear bomb core expansion plan at South Carolina and New Mexico facilities. This ruling results in a mandatory review of pit production at DOE sites across the United States, one of them being the Livermore Lab. Under the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), this provides a critical opportunity for public scrutiny of and formal comment on these assessments.
